PREFACE

It was in 1962 that the first issue of Common Market Law Reports came out, shortly after the first British application to join the European Communities had been made by the Macmillan Government. But before the second issue could appear President De Gaulle had cast his veto and British membership was postponed indefinitely—until the Wilson administration made a second application in 1967. It required a great deal of faith for the founder editors—Peter Benenson, Louis Blom-Cooper and Donald Valentine—and their publishers, Thomas Nelson & Sons Ltd., to continue publication notwithstanding. And they found a similar faith in that hard core of subscribers who remained steady during the many years when it seemed that the United Kingdom was destined to remain permanently on the outside. That vision was at last rewarded when in the Ink Spattering Ceremony of 22 January 1972 the Treaty of Accession was signed by representatives of the Communities, of the Six Original Members and of the four applicants, later to be reduced to three.

Throughout the whole of those eleven years, and those that were to follow, the style set by the creators of the Reports has continued to be followed, with the addition of only marginal refinements. The eclecticism of the first issue—the first Article 177 reference, the first Community law judgment of the French Conseil d'Etat, and the first action brought by the EEC Commission against a member-State (indeed the first European Court non-staff case to be decided under the EEC Treaty at all)—has been maintained and even extended. In different volumes can be found decisions of the European Commission of Human Rights, the International Chamber of Commerce arbitral tribunal, a U.S. District Court and the U.S. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, as well as those of the Commission of the European Communities and the German Federal Cartel Office. All the supreme courts of all the original six member-States are represented, and a host of lesser courts; an explanatory glossary of these will be found later in this Index.

The most important changes have probably been the introduction of a Restrictive Practices Supplement (the ' blue supplement ') in 1966, originally as a separate issue and later bound in, which provided greater flexibility in covering the increasing number not only of administrative decisions but also of legislation and now even press releases on Community competition matters; and secondly the introduction in 1970 of original language texts of judgments to enable users to have a greater check on accuracy, to have easy access to the original sources and thereby to make, should they wish, their own direct translations into other languages than English.

There is one change, however, which is not a matter of style but of the explosive growth of Community litigation in recent years. The blue supplement alone in the 1973 volume was only 7 pages smaller than the whole of volume 1; and the total of 1,190 pages in 1973 necessitated a division into two volumes for the following and subsequent years.

The great mass of material contained in the first twelve volumes, accessible only through the 12 separate annual indexes, has made research more tedious than it need be. It is for that reason that the present 12-year cumulative Index has been compiled. To a large extent it is a straight collation of the existing indexes, with some revision of the earlier ones to conform to the later level of sophistication. In particular, the subject index is a reference to cases rather than to pages, on the basis that the discussion of subject-matter must be understood in the whole legal and factual context of the case: in a way it is an index to rationes decidendi. There is scope for a more minute, law review type of subject index to brief references in judgments (particularly in the opinions of the advocates general), but that daunting task was left for perhaps another occasion.

The main new features are the glossary of courts and a listing of cases by parties' names, both plaintiffs' and defendants', as well as in chronological or numerical order. On the other hand, certain features of the annual indexes are excluded from the present cumulation, viz., the references to citations of national cases and national legislation. These, it is thought, are too erratic and marginal to warrant such gathering together; but they will continue to appear in the volume indexes as hitherto. The table of treaties and regulations cited is exhaustive, i.e., all references, even if only passing ones, are noted. But, to provide a modicum of guidance in what sometimes appear as pages full of figures, important or extended references to particular provisions are given in bold type.

It is hoped that this Index will be found a useful aid to using the Reports and that it may be repeated at appropriate intervals in the future.
